

Programme Specific Outcomes in English Honours

PSO1- Proficiency in English Literature: Graduates will have a thorough knowledge of the many literary genres, historical eras, and significant works of English literature. They would be able to evaluate and critically understand literary works.

PSO2- Research and Writing Skills: Through the study of literature, students will gain solid research and writing abilities. They will learn how to compile pertinent material, do literary analysis, and successfully communicate their conclusions in writing.

PSO3- Critical Thinking: The curriculum seeks to develop students' critical thinking abilities. The ability to assess literary works, recognise underlying themes and patterns, and provide meaningful interpretations should be a requirement for graduates.

PSO4- Cultural and Historical Awareness: By studying the cultural, historical, and social circumstances in which literary works are created, students will have a better grasp of these topics. They will have the ability to evaluate literary works in light of larger social movements and concerns.

PSO5- Communication Skills: The course places a strong emphasis on good oral and written communication abilities. Graduates in this programme should be capable of clearly expressing their thoughts and arguments in both academic and professional contexts.

PSO6- Independent Research and Analysis: Students will master the skills necessary to do their own independent research, evaluate intricate literary ideas, and formulate their own arguments. They ought to be able to advance the body of knowledge already established in the area.

PSO7- Critical Engagement: Graduates should be able to participate in literary conversations and debates critically, exhibiting their knowledge of diverse theoretical stances and literary criticism.

PSO8- Cultural Sensitivity: The course promotes tolerance for other viewpoints and cultural sensitivity. In order to promote an inclusive approach to literary studies, graduates should be able to interact with literature from many cultures, geographic locations, and identities.

PSO9- Transferable Skills: The programme also focuses on fostering transferable skills, such as problem-solving, time management, and collaboration, which may be useful in a variety of jobs.
