

Programme Specific Outcomes of English General

PSO1- Comprehensive Knowledge of English Literature: Graduates should have a deep understanding of English literature from various periods, genres, and cultural contexts. They should be familiar with major literary works, authors, movements, and critical theories.

PSO2- Literary Analysis and Interpretation: Graduates should possess advanced skills in analyzing and interpreting literary texts. They should be able to critically examine themes, motifs, symbols, and stylistic devices used in literature and provide insightful interpretations.

PSO3- Proficiency in Academic Writing: Graduates should have strong writing skills and be able to produce well-structured, coherent, and persuasive essays, research papers, and other scholarly documents. They should demonstrate proficiency in using proper citations and referencing conventions.

PSO4- Research Skills: Graduates should be capable of conducting independent research in the field of English literature. They should be able to formulate research questions, gather relevant sources, evaluate and synthesize information, and present their findings effectively.

PSO5- Critical Thinking and Analytical Skills: Graduates should possess advanced critical thinking and analytical skills. They should be able to analyze complex literary texts, engage in literary criticism, and construct well-reasoned arguments.

PSO6- Cultural and Historical Contextualization: Graduates should understand the historical, social, and cultural contexts in which literary works were produced. They should be able to analyze how literature reflects and shapes its cultural milieu.

PSO7- Oral Communication and Presentation Skills: Graduates should be able to effectively communicate their ideas and interpretations through oral presentations and discussions. They should demonstrate effective public speaking skills and the ability to engage with diverse audiences.

PSO8- Lifelong Learning: Graduates should be equipped with the skills and mindset for continuous learning and professional development. They should be motivated to explore new ideas, engage in intellectual discussions, and stay updated with current trends in the field of English literature.